Ain Shams University Celebrating World Oral Health Day

Date: 23rd February 2025

Location: Ain Shams University, Cairo, Egypt.

The Faculty of Dentistry at Ain Shams University organized a number of important events as part of the Faculty's celebration of World Oral Health Day, under the patronage of Prof. Mohamed Daa Zain El-Abdeen, President of the University, Prof. Ghada Farouk, Vice President for Community Service and Environmental Development, Prof. Karim El-Batouti, Dean of the Faculty, in cooperation with Prof. Reham Magdy, Vice Dean of the Faculty for Education and Student Affairs, and under the supervision of Prof. Walaa Hamed, Vice Dean of the Faculty for Community Service and Environmental Development.

A medical convoy was organized to serve refugees and immigrants in Ain Shams, with the aim of providing health care and raising awareness about the importance of oral and dental health care, in cooperation with the Egyptian Red Crescent. Medical examinations and health awareness were provided to 30 Sudanese citizens, where comprehensive medical services and examinations for oral and dental health were provided to those present, along with providing the necessary medical consultations for cases that require follow-up or treatment.

An awareness lecture was also organized on the importance of taking care of oral and dental health, which included awareness of the correct methods of brushing teeth and using a toothbrush and toothpaste, with emphasis on the importance of regular check-ups of teeth and gums, explaining the impact of eating habits on oral health and raising awareness of the relationship between mental health and oral and dental health, in addition to distributing oral care tools. A number of faculty staff and intern students participated in the convoy, who provided assistance in medical examinations and health awareness.

The faculty also organized an awareness campaign for the Oncology Department at Demerdash Hospital to improve the quality of life of head and neck cancer patients undergoing radiotherapy, with the aim of raising their awareness about the impact of radiation on oral and dental health, and how to care for the mouth during the treatment period.

The campaign included giving an awareness lecture using a presentation that addressed the impact of radiation therapy on the mouth and teeth and potential problems, in addition to providing advice on oral health care.

Initial examinations were also conducted for patients and appropriate treatment recommendations were provided. The campaign also included distributing a list of home care instructions with oral care tools, such as toothbrushes and toothpaste.

This is a positive step towards improving the quality of life of head and neck cancer patients by educating them about the importance of oral health care during radiation therapy.

At the end of the two-day celebration, the college organized an awareness event that aimed to highlight the close relationship between mental health and oral health, under the auspices of the World Dental Federation and the Community Service and Environment Affairs Sector, in the presence of Prof. Karim El-Batouti, Dean of the Faculty, Prof. Walaa Hamed, Vice Dean of the College for Environment and Community Service Affairs, Prof. Reham Magdy, Vice Dean of the Faculty for Education and Students Affairs, a number of academics, dentists, students from the Faculties of Pharmacy, Al-Asun, Girls, Arts and Sciences, and high school students, in addition to nursing and administrators from the Faculty of Dentistry and representatives of the World Dental Federation.

Prof. Karim El-Batouti, Dean of the Faculty of Dentistry, stressed that oral and dental health is an essential element of public health, as it directly affects the quality of life and the physical and psychological health of individuals. Oral problems, such as tooth decay and gum disease, may lead to serious health complications, including heart disease and diabetes.

Adding that prevention and awareness are the two main pillars of maintaining oral health, he praised the pivotal role of dental colleges in spreading awareness and providing health care to the neediest groups; as their role is not limited to academic education only, but extends to include direct interaction with needy groups and providing them with health and awareness support.

The closing ceremony included a discussion session between a number of dentists on the relationship between oral health and mental health, where the mutual effects between oral health and mental health were highlighted.

This was followed by an interactive play, in which theatrical performances were used to deliver awareness messages about the importance of oral health care, which contributed to attracting the attention of the audience and enhancing their understanding of health practices in a fun and innovative way.

The play highlighted the relationship between mental health and oral and dental health, explaining how the psychological state can affect oral health, and vice versa.

The celebration concluded with a workshop on how to manage and control psychological stress, depression and anxiety, with the participation of a number of university students, where effective methods for dealing with psychological stress were discussed.

Total of patients have been treated and got awareness 9500 patients.

Atef Barakat and Ali Ibn Abi Talib Official Language Schools

Date: Saturday 22nd February 2025

Location: Al Ismailia, Egypt.

Suez Canal University organized a health awareness campaign targeting 1,220 students from schools in Ismailia Governorate. The campaign, part of the "Your Health from Your Mouth" initiative, aims to educate children on the importance of dental care during the replacement period.

The campaign included 820 students from Atef Barakat School and 400 students from Ali Ibn Abi Talib Official Language School. Through this event, the university provided health guidelines for maintaining oral and dental health.

Dr. Nasser Mandour, President of Suez Canal University, emphasized that this campaign is part of the community activities the university is keen to organize to serve the local community. He pointed out the importance of health awareness in building a generation more health-conscious, especially during childhood, which requires special attention to basic dental care.

He explained that the university continues to launch various initiatives that enhance its pioneering role in serving the community and developing the environment.

For her part, Dr. Dina Abu El-Maati, Vice President for Community Service and Environmental Development, explained that targeting 1,220 students reflects the university's commitment to reaching the largest possible number of students to enhance their health awareness. She emphasized that awareness during childhood plays a significant role in developing healthy habits that contribute to preventing dental problems in the future.

The campaign was held under the supervision of Dr. Dalia Fayyad, Dean of the Faculty of Oral and Dental Surgery, and under the executive supervision of Dr. Wafaa Al-Hosary, Vice Dean for Community Service and Environmental Development. Dr. Al-Hosary provided students with a comprehensive explanation of the different types of primary and permanent teeth, as well as the differences between them. She also explained the replacement period and explained its timing.

She provided students with guidance on dental care during this period, including the correct way to brush their teeth, in addition to a practical workshop on tooth cleaning techniques and spacing.

First, second, third, and fourth-year students from the College of Dentistry participated in the campaign, giving them the opportunity to interact directly with children and enhance their health education skills.

The event was organized by Ms. Yvonne Habib, Director of the Communications and Conferences Department at the University's Community Service and Environmental Development Sector, in cooperation with the Community Participation Department at the North Ismailia Administration, under the supervision of Ms. Duaa Al-Ajrودي, and attended by Mr. Tawfiq Salah El-Din, Undersecretary of the North Ismailia Education Department.

Dr. Samar Adel Attia, a resident physician in the Department of Conservative Dentistry at the Faculty of Dentistry, delivered an awareness lecture on how to prevent and care for oral and dental health. She emphasized the importance of early detection of tooth decay, oral health in children, effective prevention methods, and the role of proper nutrition in combating tooth decay.

At the conclusion of the campaign, gifts were distributed to the students, including toothbrushes, toothpaste, and awareness leaflets, as part of the university's commitment to encouraging children to adopt healthy dental habits.

Celebrating World Oral Health Day in Cairo University

Date: Sunday 13th April 2025

Location: Cairo university on campus, Giza Governorate.

In celebration of World Oral Health Day:

Cairo University's Faculty of Dentistry is conducting an awareness campaign on campus to maintain the oral and dental health of university members, in cooperation with the Egyptian Dental Association.

Dr. Mohamed Sami Abdel-Sadek: Through these awareness campaigns, we work to support the state's efforts in prevention and health education, and to promote the concept of comprehensive care.

University President: Directive to provide mobile dental clinics on a regular basis on campus to conduct medical examinations of students and staff and transfer cases for further treatment at the College of Dentistry Hospital.

Dr. Ghada Abdel Bari, Acting Vice President for Community Service and Environmental Development: The University President's directives include organizing initiatives and activities to raise the level of health awareness among its members, improve the quality of healthcare, and prevent misconceptions about oral and dental health.

Dr. Geraldine Ahmed, Dean of Dentistry: The campaign targeted various groups at the university, tailored to their specific health conditions, and utilized artificial intelligence techniques and their relationship to oral and dental health.

Under the patronage of Dr. Mohamed Sami Abdel Sadek, President of the University, and the supervision of Dr. Ghada Abdel Bary, Acting Vice President for Community Service and Environmental Development, and Dr. Geraldine Ahmed, Dean of the Faculty of Dentistry at Cairo University, the Faculty of Dentistry organized an awareness campaign on campus to preserve oral and dental health. The campaign was organized in cooperation with the Egyptian Dental Association, coinciding with the celebration of World Oral Health Day.

Dr. Mohamed Sami Abdel Sadek explained that the awareness campaign organized by the Faculty of Dentistry aims to support the state's efforts in prevention and health education, and to promote the concept of comprehensive care. He pointed out that mobile clinics have been provided periodically on campus to conduct medical examinations on university students and staff, and to refer cases requiring further medical treatment to the faculty hospital. He pointed out that the awareness campaign focused on the importance of oral and dental health and its direct impact on public health, especially with regard to internal and heart diseases. It also included comprehensive awareness on ways to maintain oral and dental health and how to avoid the repercussions of neglecting oral and dental care, especially for patients suffering from chronic diseases.

For her part, Dr. Ghada Abdel Bary, Acting Vice President for Community Service and Environmental Development at Cairo University, emphasized that, in line with the University President's directives, the Community Service Sector is keen to organize numerous initiatives and activities aimed at raising health awareness among university members, thus contributing to improving the quality of healthcare for them. She praised the efforts of the Faculty of Dentistry and its positive role in educating university members, both students and staff, about the importance of taking care of oral and dental health and avoiding misconduct.

During her inspection of the awareness campaign, Dr. Ghada Abdel Bari listened to a detailed explanation from the college's students from the Conservative Dentistry Department and the campaign participants about their project on oral health care and ways to protect teeth from decay. She also met with some of the college's incoming students and learned about their participation in the awareness campaign.

Dr. Geraldine Ahmed, Dean of the College of Dentistry, explained that the awareness campaign targeted various groups at the university, tailoring them to their specific health conditions. She offered tips through printed materials on proper oral care. The campaign also utilized artificial intelligence techniques, she noted, noting that the campaign distributed toothpaste and toothbrushes to students and university staff to encourage them to take care of their teeth and protect them from the risk of tooth decay.

The awareness reached about 3000 patients.

Celebrating the world oral health day in O6 October UNIVERSITY

Date: Monday 14 April 2025

Location: Masaken Osman, 6th of October City , Giza Governorate

The Faculty of Dentistry (Pediatric Dentistry Department) has collaborated with the representative of FDI (World Dental Federation) Dr. Nahawand Thabet to celebrate the World Oral Health Day. Since the goal of the World Oral Health Day is to promote awareness and emphasize the importance of oral hygiene for everyone, an oral health education campaign targeting the kindergarten department of Brilliance School in Abu Rawash was arranged. The campaign staff included Dr. Hadeel Sabry, Vice Dean, Faculty staff members as well as a number of interns and 5th year students.

The visit included:

An oral presentation for the children emphasizing the importance of oral hygiene

- An oral presentation for the teachers about traumatic injuries in schools and the importance of prompt action
- Tooth brushing instructions and demonstration for 2340
- Activities for the children emphasizing the importance of healthy eating
- Dental screening, assessments charts were sent home to the parents with the status of their child's oral cavity
- Certificates were given out to the children who were caries free
- A take home package for each student that included a toothbrush and toothpaste, a pamphlet prepared by the Pediatric Dentistry department that included dental information relevant to the parents and further activities to be completed at home by the children.

The school management considered the visit to be a huge success and invited the campaign members to come back to meet the older grades.

This visit is considered to be the first of a series of oral health education campaigns targeting schoolchildren and in particular those who attend government schools.

Overview:

The celebration marked World Oral Health Day and was jointly celebrated with the Pediatric Dentistry Scientific Day. The event emphasized preventative oral care starting from childhood and the role of early education in maintaining lifelong oral health. It served as both a scientific platform and community outreach effort.

Key Features

- Indoor Internship students Best Case Poster Competition: Intern students presented their research and clinical cases, with winners announced during the event, showcasing emerging talent and innovation in comprehensive dentistry.
- Arts Exhibition: Curated by Prof. Noha Kabil, Head of the Pediatric Dentistry Department, this exhibition featured artwork blending art and science.
- Mascot Exhibition: A fun display featuring dental mascots to engage children and promote oral health awareness done by dental students year 2 and 3.
- Spin-the-Wheel Competitions where attendees could win special prizes, including workshop seats such as the Posterior Composites: Essential Techniques for Durable Composites hands-on workshop, sponsored by Shofu.
- Indoor Sponsors Booths: Local dental suppliers showcased their products, offering giveaways and samples to attendees.
- Awareness Lectures: Expert speakers delivered informative talks on the significance of oral health and its connection to overall well-being, focusing on the theme of the day.
- Outdoor Kids Awareness Sessions: Engaging activities designed for children to teach them about proper oral hygiene in an interactive way.
- Interactive Outdoor Booths: Various booths provided hands-on experiences related to oral health education, including demonstrations and games.

Academic and Scientific Sessions:

- Lectures on pediatric dental protocols, trauma management, and preventive care
- Guest speakers included pediatric dental consultants and behavioral specialists
- Scientific posters competition featuring real clinical cases by interns
- Winners were celebrated in an award ceremony with certificates and prizes

Children's Awareness Campaign:

- Outdoor puppet shows featuring dental hygiene themes
- Mascots demonstrating brushing techniques in fun, age-appropriate ways
- Coloring stations and storytelling sessions focusing on oral care
- Giveaway booths distributing toothbrushes, paste, and dental calendars
- Free checkups performed by interns and faculty with parental guidance

Parental Engagement:

Information booths targeted at parents shared oral hygiene checklists and dietary recommendations. Dentists discussed the importance of regular checkups and offered counseling on common misconceptions around children's oral development.

Community Participation:

Children from nearby schools were invited, and families from the local community joined. The event successfully blended education with entertainment, ensuring key messages were retained.

Indoor Scientific Program:

- Lectures by dental experts on pediatric care, oral-systemic health links, and mental health.
- Topics included childhood caries, dental anxiety, and nutritional influence.
- Research presentations and student-led discussions.

Outdoor Community & Awareness Segment:

- Tooth-Brushing Booths: Demonstrations using large dental models.
- Story Time Tent: Fun storytelling with oral health themes.
- Games and Quizzes: Engaging educational activities for children.
- Dental Checkpoints: Free screenings and consultations.
- Sponsor Booths: Free samples, giveaways, and educational materials.

Student Participation:

Dental students organized, facilitated, and led most activities, gaining real-world experience in patient education and public communication.

Sponsors and Impact Assessment:

Sponsors:

Major sponsors included Haleon, Signal, Ivory medical wear, Lamma medical , Map dent , sugarless , الشركة المصريه للتجاره و التوزيع , Shofu , Nile dental, Ory candles, and others, who offered both product-based and financial support. Educational leaflets, digital content, and care kits were available at each booth, further enhancing participant interaction and knowledge retention.

Impact:

These three events highlighted the potential of integrating physical, emotional, and oral health advocacy into campus life. All three events emphasized interdisciplinary cooperation, the value of creativity in health education, and set a precedent for future oral health and mental wellness outreach activities.

Legacy:

The British University in Egypt has established itself as a leader in creative and impactful oral health advocacy in the region, leveraging international recognition from FDI and contributing to long-term public health awareness in Egypt and beyond.

Shared Significance of Both Events:

The Stress Burnout Event and the World Oral Health Day Celebration 2025 aligned with the pediatric dentistry scientific day event are interconnected in their focus on holistic health. By addressing mental well-being through engaging activities and emphasizing the importance of oral health, these events together create a comprehensive platform for promoting wellness.

- 1. complementary Themes : Both events reinforce the message that mental health and oral health are vital components of overall well-being.
- 2. Community Building : Each event fosters a sense of community, encouraging collaboration and support among participants.
- 3. Sustainable Impact : The initiatives aim to instill lifelong habits and awareness, ensuring participants leave with practical knowledge and tools for better health.

Conclusion

This proposal outlines a cohesive approach to promoting mental health and oral hygiene through two interconnected events at the British University in Egypt. By engaging the community in meaningful activities, these events will foster a culture of wellness and awareness, ultimately benefiting both students and the surrounding community.

Helwan University Celebrating World Oral Healthday

Date: Thursday 24th April 2025

Location: Helwan university on campus, Cairo Governorate.

Helwan National Dentistry organizes World Oral Health Day activities in cooperation with FDI*

Within the framework of Helwan National University's keenness to spread health awareness and enhance medical culture among its students, the Faculty of Oral and Dental Medicine organized activities to celebrate World Oral and Dental Health Day in cooperation with the International Dental Federation (FDI), out of belief in the importance of prevention and awareness in supporting community health, and in confirmation of the university's role in providing an integrated model of medical education that combines the academic and applied aspects.

The event was held under the patronage of Dr. Al-Sayyid Qandil, President of the University, Dr. Hossam Rifai, Vice President of the University for Education and Student Affairs, and Dr. Rasha Rifai, Dean of the College and Supervisor of the Medical Sector at the University, and under the supervision of Professor Al-Sayyid Atta, Secretary-General of the University.

Dr. El-Sayed Kandil, President of Helwan National University, emphasized that organizing such events reflects the university's commitment to its mission towards building health-conscious and professional generations, noting that the university always seeks to provide full support for all initiatives that contribute to improving the health of the individual and society, stressing that health awareness begins from the classroom, and that university students represent ambassadors for awareness in their surroundings.

Dr. Rasha Rifai, Dean of the Faculty of Dentistry and Supervisor of the Medical Sector at Helwan National University, confirmed that this event comes within the framework of connecting students with global health issues, and introducing them to the importance of oral and dental health as the main gateway to human health in general.

Praising the outstanding level demonstrated by the students through demonstrations, models and scientific explanations that reflect their deep understanding of their field of study and their keenness to interact positively with society.

Today's activities addressed the importance of maintaining oral and dental health, ways to prevent cavities, and how to protect against diseases that affect the mouth and teeth.

The event witnessed wide interaction from students and faculty members, as practical and awareness-raising presentations were presented that included models, drawings, and innovative explanations created by the students, aiming to simplify health information and present it in a creative manner that attracts the attention of the audience.

The event was organized and coordinated by Dr. Maha Ishaq, Dental Program Coordinator, Dr. Enas Fath Al-Bab, and Dr. Najwa Khattab, Program Registrars.
